The future of livestock and meat trade essentially depends on animal identification and traceability as a means for verification of safety and quality.